Judge's schedule delays Pass annex hearing

BY DENA BISNETTE

A Chancery Court hearing on a proposed annexation by the city of Pass Christian has been delayed and will probably not be rescheduled until October.

Three Harrison County chancellors, William L. Stewart, Jason Floyd Jr. and John L. Morris have excused themselves from hearing the case, saying they feel it should be ruled on by a judge from outside Harrison County.

Judge Billy G. Bridges of Brandon has been selected to preside at the hearing, originally scheduled for Wednesday.

Bridges, in a telephone interview from Brandon Wednesday morning, said he agreed to take the case after receiving a telephone call from Morris.

He said he will probably hear some of the preliminary motions concerning the annexation later this month.

However, his court commitments in Brandon have delayed the hearing itself.

"With the large number of objectors involved, it is not likely that I will be able to hear the case on its own merits any earlier than October," Bridges explained.

Objections to the proposed annexation have been filed by several representatives of the Henderson Point-Pass Christian Isles Civic Association, including association president James McQueen and association spokesman Gerald Roux.

The proposed annexation includes an area extending north from Henderson Point and Pass Christian Isles to Bayou Portage; Bay Colony and Bal Moral subdivisions and the industrial seaway area east to Mene Avenue; north to Demourelle Road and east to the Long Beach city limits at Beatline Road.

Association members had presented the city board of aldermen with a petition requesting that Pass Christian's citizens be given the opportunity to vote on annexation.

State law, however, does not provide for a vote on annexation proposals. Instead, the city must pass an ordinance announcing its intent to annex and defining the annexation area. The ordinance must be approved in a chancery court before it came become law.

News Brief

COUNCIL CANDIDATES

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a political forum for Bay St. Louis city council candidates Thursday, May 9, 7 p.m. in the Courtroom of the Hancock County Courthouse, 150 Main St., Bay St. Louis.

Purpose of the forum is to allow the public an opportunity to hear all candidates running for councilmen in the Bay St. Louis elections.

The chamber encourages all interested citizens to call in or write to the chamber office (467-9048) as soon as possible to submit questions and issues which they want addressed to the candidates. The chamber's address is P.O. Box 103, Bay St. Louis, Ms 39520.

Mayor candidates address issues

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

Bay St. Louis Mayoral candidates defended their views and answered questions Wednesday at a forum sponsored by the Rotary Club.

Larry Bennett took the opportunity in his opening remarks to address what he called a "whisper campaign."

He said people are asking "How can Bennett run the city if he can't run his personal affairs?"

"As everyone knows, I have had some personal problems, but my personal problems have never once affected the way I have run the City of Bay St. Louis," he added.

Bennett also discussed

"undeniable growth" of Bay St. Louis without a single tax increase.

In introduction Vic Frankiewicz briefly outlined his training in city planning.

"When I finished at MIT I made a decision to come back here because I was very interested in working in government, working in the state of Mississippi and more particularly here on the Gulf Coast," Frankiewicz said.

He added that the Mississippi Gulf Coast was probably one of the most promising areas in the country because of wonderful development opportunities and great resources.

"We have the opportunity to grow and to grow right and in a way that preserves a way of life and preserves the quality of life, and this is the positive step I want to take in the future," Frankiewicz said.

He said one qualification that he brings to the office of the mayor is a perspective of a city planner that says look out toward our future, let's figure out what it should be, how to get there and more importantly, how to unify the community to get there.

In his opening remarks Kelvin Schulz said that Bay St. Louis was his home by choice not by heritage.

He said he believes it is time the city was turned back to its citizens.

"You as business leaders know that the bottom line is that you don't have the customer coming through the door, you are not going to make the money to pay your bills, taxes and employees," he said.

"My practical experience in business administration in the private sector equips me to lead the city to better with what we have, trying not to increase the tax burden," Schulz said.

"We need to re-evaluate and reassess what we have and to use what we have to the betterment of all the citizens in the community," he said.

Each of the candidates, each answered questions at the forum.

Q.—Drainage ditches that do not drain and that are filled with litter have always been an unsightly problem for the city. What plans do you have for a maintenance program that would solve this problem?

Bennett-Bay St. Louis has always had and always will have a drainage problem, we have always had a litter problem. Right now we are going through an expansion project with our sewage department and in doing so have had a drainage program designed for the city. Funds for implementation of this program will be included in the next budget.

Q.—Does the city intend to try to get a Urban Development Action Grant for city development around the hospital site? When? How far along is this process?

Frankiewicz—This federal grant program is designed to give local communities some federal assistance to couple with private investment to help with economic

NSTL engine test delayed

The cluster test of three space shuttle main engines scheduled for today, May 2 at National Space Technology Laboratories has been postponed indefinitely.

The test was delayed because a pre-test readiness review had not been completed, said Lisa Monti, NSTL Public Affairs Specialist.

The 50-second test firing, which is designed to verify the shuttle main propulsion system's performance at a higher thrust level, will be rescheduled when the readiness review is completed.

Monti said since this is the first test of this type in four years and the first one using actual flight engines, extra precautions are being taken.

Artists showing at library

An exhibit of prints by Coast artists Dottie Pagano and Elizabeth Helderhoff-Beasnett will be on exhibit in the Crawford Room of the Bay St. Louis-Hancock County Library from April 29 to May 27.

A reception, open to the public, will be held Saturday, May 4, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Pagano began her art studies at William Carey College, studying under Francis Price Smith. She holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Southern Mississippi where she studied under Harry Ward, Charles Ambrose and Rita DeWitt.

At the John McCrady School of Art in New Orleans, Pagano studied oil painting with Allan Flatmann; design in batik with Stella Lewis; and watercolor with Mary McCrady.

In addition, she is certified to teach art education on the kindergarten through high school levels.

In speaking of her work, Pagano says the subject matter evokes an image.

"This image dictates which media will best communicate the feelings I wish to express," she says.

"Therefore, I sometimes choose watercolor, sometimes a form of print-making or even batik or mixed media," she continued.

Elizabeth Helderhoff-Beasnett, a native of the Mississippi Gulf Coast, studied at MSCW and Mississippi College. She holds a BS and MA in art education from the University of Mississippi.

She studied watercolor with Bill Baggett and Eugenia Summer. She has also studied print-making with Sam Gore and forensic sculpture with Betty Pat Gatliff.

Currently serving as president of the Mississippi Art Association, Southern Region, Helderhoff-Beasnett is also a member of numerous art organizations including Kappa Pi, National Art Honor Society and the National Art Education Association.

In addition, she has taught art in schools, colleges, and in private classes. She has received numerous awards for her work and recently was selected to design the logo and limited edition poster for the "Toast of the Coast."

The exhibit is open to the public during regular hours at the library on US-90. The public is invited to attend the reception on May 4 between 1 and 3 p.m.

Long distance operators to be honored May 5-11

Governor Bill Allain has proclaimed May 5 through May 11 "Operator Appreciation Week" in Mississippi.

The proclamation coincides with plans by A.T.&T. Communications to honor more than 400 long distance telephone operators employed in Mississippi by the company.

The proclamation states, "Mississippians have been aided by telephone operators over the years during times of emergencies to the extent that lives have been saved because of the professional manner in which operators have reacted in critical situations."

Charles A. Williams, A.T.&T. district manager for operator services in Mississippi, said the company plans to recognize long distance operators in a series of events set for next week in Jackson, Natchez, Grenada and Meridian.

"These are the cities where A.T.&T. long distance operators are located in this state," Williams said.

"These people perform what is often a difficult and thankless job. We're going to do all we can to show them they're appreciated."

During the week, friends, family, legislators and business leaders will be invited to tour the high-tech operator services facilities in each city.

County plans trade to enlarge jail site

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors plans a property trade to enlarge the lot for the county's new jail by 20 feet.

Jail architect Fred Wagner told the board Tuesday that the L-shaped lot to be used for the facility proved to be smaller than expected.

According to Wagner, Bay St. Louis Newspapers, Inc., owner of adjacent property, has agreed to trade a 20-foot strip of land behind the Sea Coast Echo Building for a comparable strip of county property at the right side of the building.

Board attorney Walter Gex III questioned how the trade would be accomplished. "I don't question the legality of the trade, but what we may have to do is declare this property surplus and sell it to them, then let them sell their piece of land to us for the same price," he explained.

In other business, the board was addressed by a representative of the Hancock County Animal Control Commission regarding the county dog warden, Lisle Dedeaux.

Dedeaux, also the county ranger, was asked by the board last month to add the duties of animal warden to his job for an additional $250 in pay.

According to Cel Dumestre Jr., commission chairman, Dedeaux originally turned down the job but accepted it after commission members requested and obtained a mileage allowance for him.

City dog wardens for Waveland and Bay St. Louis put in eight to ten hours work each week at the animal shelter, Dumestre said. In view of the additional travel required for Dedeaux, that requirement was reduced to three hours.

Dedeaux, however, has failed to report for work at the shelter.

According to Sheriff Ronald Peterson, who has some jurisdiction over the duties of dog warden because he is required by law to be deputized, the board provided no job description upon hiring Dedeaux and he may not know he is expected to assist at the shelter.

Action on the complaint has been delayed until the board's Monday meeting in order to give Dedeaux a chance to address the supervisors. Also on Monday, the board went on record opposing a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plan to control Pearl River flooding in the Slidell, La., area.

Travira and Sam Perniciaro, board attorney Walter Gex III, WLOX cameraman Mo Capobianco, Supervisor A.A. Kellar and Chancery Clerk Michael Necaise. (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

Board president A.A. Kellar, who had attended a Slidell public hearing on the matter about two weeks ago, said the Corps plan would add an inch of water to the Pearlinton area during a major flood.

"We can ill afford to have any more water there. Another inch would put it in a lot more houses," he explained.

Kellar repeated earlier public statements that he favors returning the river to its original channel, which the Corps altered almost a century ago.

In other business, the board authorized Gex to obtain an attorney general's opinion on whether a special election should be called for a new Justice Court judge.

District One Judge Bruce Necaise has resigned, effective June 1. Necaise's letter of resignation said he was leaving the post "due to conditions which make it impossible to fulfill the present requirements of my office."

Kellar said the board may be authorized to appoint a temporary successor to serve the remainder of Necaise's term or until a special election is called.

In addition, the board authorized David Taylor of Gulf Coast Regional Planning Commission to meet with Paul Montjoy of Gulf Coast Waste and Disposal regarding plans to clean up three illegal dumps on 16th section land in beats two and three.

Taylor will report the results of the meeting to the board on Monday.

The board also authorized Gex and Chancery Clerk Michael Necaise to meet with State Tax Commission representatives in Jackson to find out what action the county should take on a $95,000 shortage in school district funds.

Necaise discovered and reported the shortage, which he said resulted from an error in figuring tax millage, last month.

The board meets again at 9 a.m. Monday.

TREATMENT FOR PEPTIC ULCERS

Q. I have had recurrent ulcers for many years and have always taken antacids. Are any new treatments available?

A. Peptic ulcers generally are treated by medications, including antacids and acid suppressor drugs. Dietary modifications have been deemphasized and surgery is used much less frequently.

Two new drugs, cimetidine (Tagamet) and ranitidine (Zantac) do not neutralize the stomach acids as antacids do but actually reduce the amount of acid the stomach produces. Tagamet is taken four times each day and Zantac is taken twice a day. Both Tagamet and Zantac increase the rate of healing in peptic ulcers. Taken before bedtime, on a regular basis, the drugs may reduce long-term recurrences of ulcer attacks. The one potential drawback to Tagamet and Zantac is that the long-term side effects are unknown, therefore doctors are cautious about using them on a continuing basis. However, few long-term ill effects yet have been noted.

Antacids which used to be standard treatment for peptic ulcers are used much less extensively today. Liquid antacid is more effective than the pill form in quickly neutralizing the stomach acid and thereby protecting the delicate membranes of the stomach and duodenum. While antacids, such as Mylanta, Maalox and Gelusil, are effective if taken in large and frequent doses, they can cause several unpleasant side effects. Diarrhea and constipation are the most common, depending on the brand of antacid you use.

Aspirin and aspirin-containing compounds should be avoided by anyone with ulcers because they irritate the stomach and duodenal linings and may provoke bleeding. Whether aspirin actually causes gastric ulcers is unclear, but aspirin does retard the healing rate in peptic ulcers.

Previously, ulcer patients were advised to restrict their diets to bland foods, with an emphasis on mild foods containing milk and carbohydrates. Strict ulcer diets are rarely used today. Most doctors tell their patients only to avoid those foods that cause them to have pain, though some persons with ulcers find that their ulcers heal regardless of what they eat. Your own diet is something you can discuss with your doctor.

Doctors usually prefer to treat an ulcer with medication before recommending surgery. However, in the case of a perforated ulcer, which extends through the entire thickness of the stomach or the duodenum, surgery is not only recommended, it sometimes is necessary to save a patient's life.

Emotional stress also has been shown to play a role in causing ulcers. Here are some suggestions to help you improve your lifestyle and remove some of the stress and tension:

• Exercise regularly, about three times a week. Exercise can make you feel less tense and more relaxed, so you can sleep better and generally feel healthier.

• Learn to relax. Schedule some time each day to do something that you enjoy.

• Talk out your worries. Don't keep them bottled inside. If you are unable to cope, it may be wise to seek professional help.

SPECIAL ROTARY GUEST—Mrs. John Newkirk, president of the Bay-Waveland Garden Club, addresses members of the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club on efforts by the organization in promoting beautification. She also gave a brief history of the organization which was formed in 1939, with Mrs. Leo Seal Sr. as the first president. Those in photo include, from left, Mrs. Newkirk, Mrs. Clarence Ladner, club member; Clarence Ladner,

Rotary program chairman for April; and Hugh Miller, back to camera. In 1985 the Bay-Waveland Garden Club distributed over 200 crepe myrtle trees with funds made from an Antique Sale, Mrs. Newkirk said. The crepe myrtle trees were purchased from Adams Lorraine Flower Shop at a very special price, and Mrs. Newkirk stated she would like to see one of the trees on every lot in the county. MISSISSIPPI CONSUMER REPORT

A Service of the Consumer Protection Division
Of The Office Of
Edwin Lloyd Pittman, Attorney General

VICTIMS TO GET NOTICE FROM PAROLE BOARD

A new law passed this session, at the request of the Attorney General, will give some notification to victims of crimes and to local law enforcement officials when a convicted felon is released from Parchman or is eligible for parole.

The law requires the director of records at Parchman to notify the sheriff of the county where the crime was committed when a prisoner is released because of discharge, parole, pardon, temporary personal leave or pass. This notice must be given within 48 hours prior to the release.

If a convicted felon is being paroled to a county other than the one where the crime was committed, the parole board is required to notify the sheriff, the district attorney and the circuit judge of the county to which he is being paroled, in addition to sending the notice to the sheriff of the first county.

This law should keep convicted felons from being back on the streets of a city or county without the law officers knowing they are out and should help to keep down the number of crimes committed by repeat offenders. The notice has to be given if the convict is released for any reason other than sickness or death in his family.

Another part of the new law requires the parole board to give notice to the victim of the crime when a prisoner is being considered for parole. In order to be notified, the victim must furnish the parole board with a current address where notice can be sent. If the crime was a homicide, a member of the immediate family of the victim may receive notice of the parole hearing by sending the board a current address for that purpose.

The notice to victims of the parole hearing was the only part of a comprehensive victim's rights package passed by the Legislature this session. Other bills to compensate victims for monetary losses and to give the victims a more active role in trial and sentencing phases died in committees of the House of Representatives.

Attorney General Pittman says he will have a victim's rights package brought back before the Legislature again next year, along with the other bills in the anti-crime package which died this year.

The new law has been signed by the governor and is now in effect, so victims who want to be notified of parole hearings for felons who are currently serving time in Parchman should write to Roy Long, Administrator, Probation and Parole Board, Mississippi State Penitentiary, Parchman, MS 39728.

NEW LAW ON CHILD ABUSE

Another new law passed this session will speed up the process of reporting and prosecuting cases of child abuse. The new statute requires that the District Attorney's office be notified within 72 hours when the Department of Public Welfare, after an evidentiary hearing, finds that a child has been abused. Prior to the new law, reports of child abuse went from the Welfare Department to the sheriff or the municipal police department where the child lived. Under the new law, anyone having reasonable cause to suspect that a child is being abused should report that suspicion immediately to the local welfare department office.

Attorney General Pittman and members of his staff have made several talks lately attempting to bring the seriousness of the child abuse situation to public attention. Over 4,000 cases of abuse, sexual abuse and neglect involving children were reported in 1984 to the Mississippi Department of Public Welfare.

Pittman urges all Mississippians to join in protecting the children of our state. If you suspect that child abuse is happening in your neighborhood or your town, call the welfare department. Their investigation could save a child many hours of pain and heartbreak; it could even save the child's life.

CONSUMERS GET RESTITUTION

The Consumer Protection Division's March restitution figure was $76,910.54, bringing the 1985 restitution amount to date to $225,358.11.

"If restitutions keep up at this pace," Pittman said, "we will end the year with more money returned, or goods and services delivered to Mississippi consumers than we had in 1984, which was a record-breaking year for consumer protection."

IN CONGRESS

By Cong. Trent Lott

JOBS, JOBS AND JOBS

Three words describe the goal of the nation's current economic recovery program: jobs, jobs and jobs.

We create jobs in industry—particularly in the housing-related areas—when interest and inflation rates are lowered. Interest rates are lowered in turn when the deficit falls, and the deficit falls when federal spending is brought under control.

We have seen surges in employment as a result of pro-growth initiatives to improve productivity and increase American competitiveness in world markets. We have cut taxes, slowed spending growth and eliminated unnecessary regulations.

These policies have increased incentives for investment and helped us modernize our industrial plant and equipment—harnessing the high-tech revolution to improve productivity and competitiveness and create more new jobs.

At the same time, I am working to open world markets for Mississippi products and to help us provide the skills needed to keep us competitive into the next century.

Given this positive climate, our challenge in South Mississippi is to funnel jobs into those areas where the need is greatest and to be more aggressive in boosting our resources to attract new industry.

I am pleased to report that we are meeting that challenge. A combination of positive federal programs is making possible the construction in Leakesville of an export lumber mill which will provide new jobs for over 100 persons. This industry which will provide trade benefits for the entire South Mississippi region is not coming about as a result of any oft-criticized make-work program created by the Congress.

South Mississippi also has benefited from enactment by the Congress last year of the Job Training Partnership Act. This law offers incentives for corporations to retrain unemployed workers rather than leaving the workers with the alternative of collecting straight unemployment compensation.

Retraining provides our workers with new skills, making them competitive in the newer high-tech industries, and, at the same time, preserves the growth economy we need.

Given the chance, Mississippians can out-compete, out-perform and out-sell anybody.

The days of no-growth are all over. Our nation's economic policies are opening new vistas of prosperity and opportunity for working Mississippians, and my goal as we approach the consideration of the 1986 budget will be to ensure that those opportunities for jobs remain open for our state.

Thomas Bennett named medical examiner

Persons who contemplate committing murder in Mississippi should think twice, according to Commissioner of Public Safety James L. Roberts Jr.

"Mississippi's public policy, expressed by and through the Legislature, is that Mississippi will not be known as a haven for murderers and murder will not be tolerated in this state," Roberts said.

The warning was issued before a group of law enforcement and criminal justice system representatives who attended a news conference held to introduce the state medical examiner.

"The Department of Public Safety, all of law enforcement, and the general public we serve owe a deep debt of gratitude to the Legislature.

"You (the Legislature) have now authorized us to tell potential murderers that our embarrassment is over and any murder will be scientifically investigated and the person responsible will be prosecuted accordingly," Roberts told the group.

Dr. Thomas L. Bennett, an American Board of Pathology-certified forensic pathologist, became Mississippi's medical examiner April 1.

"I always compare a forensic pathologist to a hospital pathologist," Bennett said.

"A hospital pathologist feels that man is a fragile creature who will ultimately die and when death comes it is no surprise.

"A forensic pathologist feels that man is immortal and there is no reason why he cannot live forever.

"It is my duty to go in and find out what struck down that person before his time, give this information to the law enforcement people and let them do with it what they should," the 32-year-old medical examiner said.

Bennett said he is looking forward to consulting with and teaching coroners, physicians, law enforcement personnel, families and others regarding investigations of deaths or injuries and their mechanisms.

A cross section of law enforcement leaders, many of whom had avidly supported the establishment of the medical examiner system in Mississippi, were on hand to meet Bennett.

"I go back to the days when there was not a medical examiner system in the state of Mississippi and we did the best we could in determining the cause of death of a person whose body was found," Natchez Chief of Police Kenneth Fairly said.

"I think the positioning of the medical examiner in the Mississippi

Crime Lab is very good in that he is closely aligned with investigators of the Department of Public Safety whom we call upon in Natchez, a 60-man police department, when we have major crimes, usually homicides.

"The potential for instruction for young officers in the state of Mississippi by Dr. Bennett is just unimaginable at this point," Fairly, who serves as president of the Mississippi Association of Chiefs of Police, said.

Panola County Sheriff David Bryan of Batesville said, "Since we have a medical examiner, we will have a competent witness who is qualified as an expert witness for just about every homicide case we bring before a jury in the future.

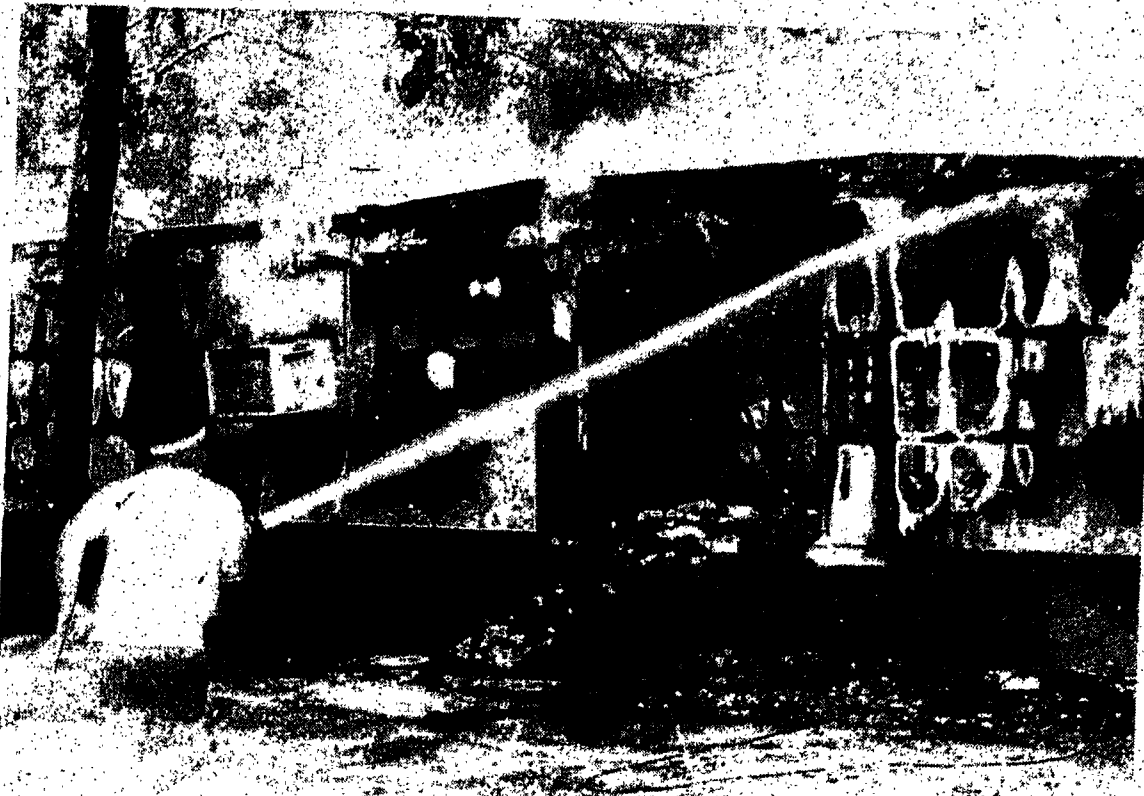

"Dr. Bennett's arrival indicates an improvement in our system and we welcome the addition," the sheriff said.

Bryan was speaking in behalf of the Mississippi Sheriffs Association.

"With Dr. Bennett here maybe the whole state can reap the benefits of untold rewards from his expertise. I am glad he is here, especially for the area of continuing education," Hinds County Coroner Robert Martin, president of the Mississippi Coroners Association, told the audience.

Also on the program were Marvin L. (Sonny) White Jr., special assistant attorney general and first vice president of the Mississippi Prosecutors Association; Roy Thigpen, director of the Governor's Highway Safety Program and Criminal Justice Planning; Clinton Police Chief Jim Dukes, president of the Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Association; and Columbus Police Officer Roy Myers, president of the Tennessee-Mississippi Sheriffs & Peace Officers Association.

Others attending were Dr. Paul Whiteside, Pontotoc County coroner; Wayne Snuggs, director, Criminal Division, Attorney General's Office; Investigator Hal Ratchford of the Attorney General's Office; Col. George Saxon, chief of the Mississippi Highway Patrol; Lt. Col. Kenneth Dukes, assistant chief of patrol; Walter Tucker, director of the Highway Patrol's Criminal Investigation Bureau; Kent McDaniel, director, Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy; Dan Davis, assistant director, Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics; Donald Ready, director, Mississippi Crime Laboratory; and Wilsey Kelly, assistant director, Mississippi Crime Laboratory.

On Insulation

Insulation is rated by R-values. These are expressed as numbers: an example, R-30. The "R" means resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulation power. While one type or brand of insulation might be thicker or thinner than another, if they're rated at the same R-value, they will perform the same.

Are you going to insulate your home? Weatherstrip? Put up storm windows and doors? Install conservation measures? If so, owners as well as renters are eligible for a tax credit if the products were purchased and installed between April 20, 1977 and December 31, 1985. Still plenty of time then, to take advantage of the credit -15 percent of the first $2,000 invested up to a maximum of $300. Check with your local IRS office for complete details.

On home improvements

You may be wasting money as well as time if you buy good paint but fail to prepare the wall surface properly before you put it on indoor rooms. Even the best paint won't stick to dirty or greasy walls. Nor will it hide cracks and other large marks. Prepare the surface; the end result is well worth the effort.

On retirement planning

Don't wait until you're old to begin thinking about retirement income. Middle-aged workers should have begun a retirement savings for those golden years.

Find out if your company pension plan gives you what you need. There are two basic types of pension plans: a defined benefit plan and a defined contribution plan.

A defined benefit plan is paid by the company and provides designated benefits. A defined contribution plan, such as a profit-sharing plan, specifies the contributions made by you and the employer. The benefit is based on the amount in your account at retirement.

If you are covered under a pension plan, find out the answers to these questions:

—What are the eligibility requirements? How old do I have to be and how long do I have to be employed by the company before I am covered?

—When do my benefits become vested? That is, when do the benefits belong to me whether or not I keep working for the same employer, and whether I am laid off or fired?

—How is the amount of pension calculated? When can I begin to receive benefits? Will those benefits ever increase once they begin?

—What are the payment options? Will my dependents be protected after my death? Will I have the option of electing a lump sum payment?

—How much can I expect to receive? Is that amount "integrated" with Social Security benefits?

—When may I retire under the plan? How will my pension be affected if I retire early or if I continue to work past age 65?

On direct deposit

People receiving government checks are being urged by the Treasury Department to have those checks deposited directly into their bank accounts using the electronic fund transfer. This not only omits the chance of a person's check being lost or stolen but also reduces the cost of printing and processing the checks. For more information on this service, write:

Senior Update

BY VIVIENNE BODEAU

In the book CARING FOR YOUR AGING PARENTS by Robert R. Cadmus, M.D., we read a phrase that interested us. It said, "As a parent, it is your job to be concerned about the lifestyle of your children. But it is not your job to act like a parent with your own parents. You have to act differently: concerned, yes; involved, yes; loving, yes; but totally responsible, no."

Before we go further, let us say that this column today is for both seniors and the younger generations. It applies to those of you with very aged parents and to you with those not so old. Probably you do not share with your parents the same ideas as to what a good time is. If you try to force your habits, attitudes and ideas on them, conflict will result. Since the younger you are, the more flexible you are, the young should try to conform to the older concepts when visiting parents and grandparents. You can revert to your own lifestyle when you return home.

Generally children do not adopt the lifestyles of their parents, nor do older people live like their children. Lifestyles change with each passing generation. Some older people may let their hair grow long and like rock 'n' roll. Some younger people may choose the work ethic and the morals of their parents. But these are exceptions.

For the older reader we say to remember that you should not be too disappointed, or too apprehensive when you observe the lifestyles with which you do not agree. Don't doubt that things will work out. They did for all the past generations.

We seem to remember dancing the Charleston, Tiger Rag and wearing flapper clothes (notice the similarity in today's dresses). We remember when ladies began to smoke in public. We remember prohibition and speakeasies. We came through it all right, didn't we? Try to keep your parents from becoming inactive even if they are disabled. Friends can visit them. You can take them out and plan little parties for them.

Sleep patterns change drastically as your parents grow older and most really elderly people get their sleep in short cat naps, usually falling asleep after eating, exercising or while watching television. It is better if their days can be made more stimulating so that they do not nap too often. To keep the daylight and nighttime hours separate is best, using them for their periods of activity and rest.

We are talking today of caring for parents in an emotional way. We will write of this again and also of monetary care.

Teaching responsibility

Select pets to match child's age, capabilities

By NORINE BARNES
Child Development Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Having a pet is not only fun but also offers an opportunity to observe the development of a small dependent creature.

Do not expect a child of any age to assume total responsibility for a pet. Humane treatment of animals is primarily an adult responsibility.

The younger a child is the less complicated a pet he should have. Since very young children do not know how to handle animals gently and are often afraid of them, keeping a goldfish is a good beginning. Observing and talking about their habits, how often they eat and how they rise to the surface for the food is a good introduction to the care of another living creature.

As the child gets older, try a few gerbils or hamsters. A simple responsibility at this age might be putting water in the animal's dish.

Six to eight years is an ideal time to learn what an animal needs in order to be healthy and comfortable. Talk about what kind of bedding the animal requires. Rabbits are different from dogs. Birds have different requirements than cats. In addition, each creature seems to have a personality of its own and adjusting to the animal's temperament is another good lesson for a child.

Some parents make the mistake of expecting a child to take total responsibility for the care of the pet. This can lead to neglect and it is the defenseless animal that suffers. Place a chart or calendar on the kitchen wall. Mark off which day the child is to walk or feed the pet. Responsibilities can be divided among the members of the family.

At nine to twelve years a child takes great pleasure in training an animal, not only to become a good member of the family but perhaps to entertain as well. Some animals are better at doing tricks than others but whatever small tricks the pet masters, the accomplishment will represent an achievement for the trainer as well.

A child may wish to stuff a homemade pillow for the pet or braid a harness. Perhaps a small dog sled can be put together with some adult help. Homemade pet toys, like any homemade toys, tend to give the creator a lot of satisfaction.

The love a child gives an animal will be returned tenfold and a loving pet is wonderful company for a child.

Children face problems in accepting death loss

By Norine Barnes

Death of a close friend or relative is a painful human experience. No person can be protected from this pain, but people, including children, can be helped to live with it and learn from the experience.

It is important to remember that the death of a relative is an important family crisis. Children are acutely aware of emotional stress in adults. Infants and toddlers know and react to adult feelings without any understanding of the cause of the stress. Their efforts to empathize or their distress at the change in adult behavior should be recognized, understood and appreciated.

After children reach the stage in which they can form attachments to particular people, they can and do experience a sense of loss upon the death of someone close to them. Preschoolers, ages three to six, have some understanding though vague of the concept of death. Generally, it's considered temporary like sleep and the child believes that the person will return.

Children from six to 10 are able to understand the finality of death and may realize that they too can die. It is also during these years that many children begin to hide their feelings and become less willing to talk about emotional problems.

After the age of 10 many children can understand the reality of death and are ready for explanations about the physical and biological processes. From the adolescent years until late middle age, death is usually connected with old age and considered a long way off and not something to be concerned about year.

While age is an important factor to consider, parents also can be guided by the child's past experiences with death. Has the child already experienced a death in the family? Has the child lost a family pet? How aware is the child of the concept of death in nursery rhymes? Has the child expressed his or her thoughts about death as portrayed on television?

When parents know how much their child understands about death and how he or she feels about it, it will be easier for them to decide how much and in what ways to include their children.

Some common problems children develop in relation to death are:

—They may feel guilty that they caused the death. Either they have wished something bad would happen to the dead person or they have done something for which they feel they are being punished.

—When no explanation of the death or the funeral is made to them, children may form misconceptions that can last for years.

It is difficult for children to understand that words can have more than one meaning. This is the cause of problems children encounter where adults use substitute words for dead. A child who has been told the Grandpa is "just sleeping" may fear to go to sleep. From other euphemisms children may develop fears of God, trips or journeys or simply of being too tired.

A basic fear in all children is abandonment. When a parent dies, children must have thoughtful explanations of the causes of death and reassurances that the remaining parent will be there to care for the child.

Children can be helped during the crisis of death and in the grieving period afterward.

AMERICAN ART

"New World Visions," a two-part documentary examining the first 250 years of American art, architecture and design, can be seen at 9 p.m., Thursdays, May 2 and 9, on Mississippi ETV. It will be rebroadcast at 2 p.m., Saturdays.

Written, hosted and narrated by Vincent Scully, sterling professor of the history of art at Yale, the series uses as its base the new American wing of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art with its collection of paintings, sculpture, decorative arts, furnishings and recreated room settings. Scully also ventures out on location into larger architectural or natural settings.

Part One begins with the dawn of American colonization and proceeds to the mid-19th century. Part Two continues through the Civil War and up to the years prior to the outbreak of World War I.

Caroline Kennedy was coordinating producer of the series.

The upcoming Kentucky Derby this Saturday is the annual reason for the closest thing on earth to a Southern Mint Julep Festival—not that Southerners and others don't enjoy a julep at many another time. So, we might as well join the inevitable argument as to the "right" formula for this spirited concoction which has lifted spirits for many a long year.

To many Southerners, Paradise is a close as sitting on the porch or patio, sipping a frosted mint julep, and also for many, the subject of the recipe is as explosive as the LSU-Ole Miss game or the proper way to cook Southern fried chicken, or one's antecedents or "The War, Suh"—the War Between the States, that is.

My grandfathers, gentlemen of the Old South, were generally in agreement, so I'm told, on such minor matters as the younger generation, the state of the country and the world, and so on.

But—Grandfather Barrett insisted that the mint in his julep be crushed, while Grandfather Daly considered this a desecration (scarcely less abominable than referring to the War Between the States as the Civil War—both insisting that there was "nothing civil about it, Suh.")

Irvin S. Cobb, the famous Kentucky humorist, once said that: "He who has not tasted one (a Mint Julep) has lived in vain." I agree, don't you?

Here is:

COBB'S CLASSIC JULEP

6 sprigs freshly picked young mint
Kentucky Bourbon Whiskey? as your tolerance advises.
Finely cracked ice
2 Tbsp. water
1 lump sugar

This is just for one Julep, remember—purists insist that they must be made one by one.

Crush three of the mint sprigs in the bottom of a glass with a silver or wooden muddler—or use the family heirloom silver stirrup cups if you have any about the house.

Rub the mint all around the inside of the glass or cup and discard any remains. Fill the glass with finely cracked ice and slowly pour in approximately three ounces of Kentucky Bourbon whiskey (less if this will send you to Never-Never Land. I find one ounce quite tasty and potent!)

At any rate, add the water in which the lump of sugar has been dissolved—but do not stir! Let the whiskey trickle to the bottom of the glass all by itself. Place two or three sprigs of mint in the mouth of the glass, and happily sip that potent elixir.

The standard Virginia Mint Julep, served as an eye-opener on old Colonial plantations before breakfast, calls for a measure (jigger or two) of Bourbon; some preferred rye whiskey) poured over four sprigs of mint and allowed to stand for an hour; at the same time, a teaspoon of sugar was dissolved in a bit of water, in another glass.

Then the mint was removed from the bourbon, which was then poured into the sugar and water—follow me?—and the mixture poured back and forth between the two glasses until all was well mixed.

Then—remember, there were many helpers in those kitchens of other days—a glass was filled with crushed ice and the mixture poured over it, and briefly stirred until frost formed on the outside. The remaining sprigs of mint were distributed around the top of the glass.

Some purists frost the cups before making the juleps. However you make it, after two or three of these potent potations, you won't care which horse wins the Derby.

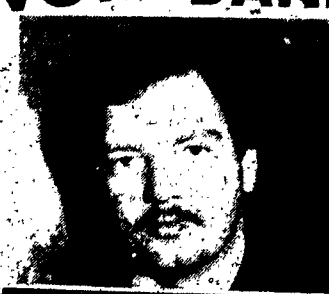

P.S. Another old, old recipe: For one julep—"Put two sprigs of fresh mint in the bottom of a tall, thin glass or silver cup. Add a rounded teaspoon of powdered sugar and a few drops of water, and using a wooden muddler, bruise the mint, thoroughly, with the sugar and water.

"Pour in a jigger of bourbon whiskey, then pack the glass to the brim with finely crushed ice. Add one more jigger of the whiskey and let it trickle to the bottom of the glass. Put a sprig of fresh mint atop, and serve with two straws for sipping—and if you wish, dip the top sprig of mint in finely powdered sugar while damp." Enjoy!

in Mississippi Gardens

Growing concern over food prices and the trend toward natural foods has spurred the "backyard gardener" in many consumers.

More people had gardens last year and will likely have them again this year. As the interest in home gardening increases, the surplus of produce must be canned or frozen.

Many homemakers who are familiar with these techniques may not need additional assistance. However, many are trying their hand at gardening and food preservation for the first time in an effort to cut food cost.

Whatever the reason, those planning to grow part of their food supply this year should consider several points.

First, contact the county Extension office before beginning for guidelines on gardening, varieties of fruits and vegetables that grow best in the area and that freeze or can best. The Extension office can provide information on every phase of gardening from planning, planting, growing, and harvesting, to using the product.

Home-grown produce frequently tastes better and is fresher and more nutritious than that bought in stores. In addition, gardening is a healthy leisure activity for all ages, providing lots of sunshine, fresh air and not-too-strenuous. Children can also learn much about nature's ways from tending a garden.

Gardens take considerable effort. Pots of herbs on the windowsill or tomato plants in a tub on the patio do not constitute gardening. Gardeners should determine the amount of produce they can consume and distribute to friends, and limit their planting accordingly.

The Extension home economist has information on all kinds of food preservation. Use only the latest recommended procedures for canning and freezing. This information is constantly checked and revised as new research becomes available.

Extension Service food and nutrition specialists have prepared publications on every phase of food preservation. The publications are free so get a copy from the county Extension home economist before preserving the fruits of the garden.

Do not fall for short-cut methods in preserving food. Specific equipment is necessary for different foods. Follow directions carefully to avoid wasting time and money.

Foods like green beans must be processed in a pressure canner or botulism poisoning could result. Many homemakers have thrown away large quantities of green beans and other low acid vegetables which showed signs of spoilage. These were usually canned by the boiling water bath method—which should never be done with any low acid vegetable.

Q. My 4-year-old nephew is always sick with ear infections. Every time my sister turns around, she is taking him to the doctor. Is this normal or is something else wrong?

A. Ear infections rank next to routine checkups as one of the most common reasons children are brought to a doctor, says Dr. James Fruthaler, an Ochsner Clinic pediatrician.

Children apt to get ear infections are usually besieged by two general types:

The first is serous otitis, which is a build-up of fluid behind the eardrum caused by a blockage of the eustachian tube, which normally drains the middle ear. It may exist chronically, impairing the child's ability to hear but without causing any discomfort. Children are generally screened for the condition several times during their school years by state health agencies.

Parents of younger children should be alert for signs of hearing difficulties in infants and preschoolers as well as school-age children. This condition can retard a young child's language development and impair school work since it makes hearing difficult.

Because of repeated trips to the physician, it seems your nephew's condition may fall into the second general category of ear infections known as infective otitis, a condition accompanied by inflammation and pain. Infective otitis occurs when there is an infection as well as a fluid build-up behind the eardrum. Antibiotics are used to combat the infection, but the effect on pain is not noticeably reduced for 24 to 48 hours. Heat, aspirin or Tylenol and ear drops are most effective to alleviate this discomfort.

Dr. Fruthaler says there is a widely reported, and somewhat controversial, therapy of the insertion of a tube through the eardrum to drain the area behind it. If your sister has questions about this procedure, her doctor can explain it and make his recommendations.

GRIDIRON SHOWS

Washington's Gridiron Club for journalists and the unique relationship with the politicians they cover is explored in a special program on ETV, "Politicians on the Gridiron: 100 Years of the Gridiron."

The program, hosted by Charles McDowell, can be seen at 10 p.m., Monday, May 6, on Mississippi ETV.

Since 1885 the Gridiron Club of senior Washington correspondents has been inviting government leaders to private dinners and mocking them in song and skit. The guest-politicians—including every president from William Henry Harrison to Ronald Reagan—have submitted more or less cheerfully to this assault by parody.

Politicians put the press on the grill, too, and these evenings of sometimes searing hilarity at the Gridiron Club have become an American institution.

INFLAMED NERVES

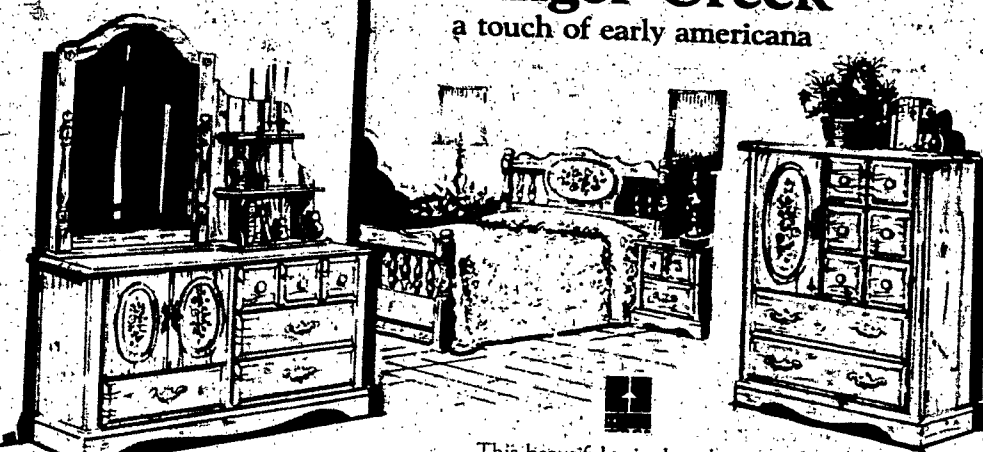

These conditions occur more frequently than previously believed. When nerves in the body become inflamed, they often create conditions of acute pain. Of course, the location of the pain varies with the nerve affected and the course it travels all the way to the body. The majority of these cases are the direct result of NERVE ROOT pressure. Structural positions within the spinal column cause nerve root pressure. The nerve roots are the "wires" that carry messages from the brain to the rest of the body. When they are compressed, they can cause pain, numbness, and weakness in the limbs.

Black business leader to address Gulf Park's New Economy Conference

The founder of one of America's top black-owned businesses will be among featured speakers during a "New Economy Conference" scheduled May 5-8 at the University of Southern Mississippi's Gulf Park campus.

Josh Smith, founder of Maxima Corp., one of the 500 fastest growing, privately held corporations in the United States—will address the conference at noon May 6.

With just four employees in 1978, Smith has built the company into one of the nation's top suppliers of specific high-technology-oriented management information to industry. The company now employs more than 400 workers and had a gross income of $20 million in 1984.

Smith will be among a variety of keynote speakers who will share their first-hand knowledge of high technology from varying perspectives during the conference.

Dr. Shirley J. Jones, dean of the Graduate School of Social Work at USM, is serving as co-director of the conference along with Carroll Marsalis, program manager of High Technology Demonstrations for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The opening day's program will include addresses by a scientist specializing in developing robots, an expert in economic forecasting, the founder of one of the nation's fastest growing companies and the vice mayor of a Silicon Valley city.

Robotics expert Dr. Delbert Tesar will address the conference at 9 a.m. Monday, May 6.

Tesar, now at the University of Texas at Austin, founded the Center for Intelligent Machines and Robotics for the Florida Board of Regents.

He is developing a similar program at the University of Texas with applications in robotics, manufacturing and logistics.

The program's funding is projected to reach $5 million annually by 1988. A member of the board of directors of Robotics International, of the Society of Mechanical Engineers, Tesar has pursued research in the machine field for 25 years.

Some of the applications of his research into interactive design and robotic manipulators are found in microsurgery, ocean-floor economy, coal mines, nuclear reactor maintenance, space exploration and in the military.

An economic and occupational outlook to the year 2,000 will be presented by Dr. Alvin Cruze, vice president for Economic and Social Systems at North Carolina's Research Triangle Park. Cruze will speak at 10:45 a.m. Monday.

Cruze is an economist specializing in applied labor market studies. He was involved in a research project to determine the links between economic growth and vocational education. He currently is working on a U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics project to evaluate the reliability of employment projections.

Smith will speak at noon.

"Silicon Gold," an examination of the rapid growth of an area of California, will be presented by Iola Williams, vice mayor of San Jose, Calif. Williams, a graduate of Jackson State University, will explain the importance of Silicon Valley to the nation and the potential for developing similar high technology industry in Mississippi.

A member of the National League of Cities Board of Directors, Williams was born in Hattiesburg. She was elected to the San Jose City Council in 1980. Her presentation is scheduled for 4 p.m. Monday.

San Jose State University President Dr. Gail Fullerton will speak at 9 a.m. May 7. A professor of sociology at SJSU, Fullerton serves on the executive committee of the Western College Association. She will discuss the role of education in the new economy.

Clennie Murphy, acting associate commissioner, Headstart Bureau will speak at the May 7 luncheon. Murphy, who has been in federal service for 27 years, has managed the Headstart Bureau within the Department of Health and Human Services since 1982.

The bureau has a $1 billion budget and provides services to more than 450,000 low-income preschool children nationwide. Murphy will discuss the social concerns to be considered in the development of a high technology economy.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, USM, the Governor's Office for Job Development, the Mississippi Headstart directors, the Mississippi Junior College Association and the Southeast Regional National Alliance of Business are among conference sponsors.

Other sponsors include the Mississippi Industrial Council and the Mississippi Department of Vocational-Technical Education.

For additional information, call USM-Gulf Park Conferences and Workshops at (601) 865-4508 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. or (601) 865-4519 after 5 p.m.

Point of Law

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

Q. Under what circumstances can parental rights be terminated?

A. Though parents have an inherent right to care for their children, Mississippi law identifies six situations under which the State may legally terminate parental rights.

The court may terminate parental rights if the parent has abandoned the child; the parent has been abusive to the child; or the parent is disabled by alcohol or drug addiction, severe mental deficiencies or mental illness.

In many instances, the court may decide to place the child with a social welfare agency. If, after a reasonable time, the parents do not make satisfactory effort to visit the child, or there is a substantial erosion of the parent-child relationship, the court may decide to terminate the parental rights.

Finally, the parents themselves may execute a written voluntary release relinquishing all rights to the child.

How are the rights of parents terminated?

A. Any person, agency or institution may file a petition for termination of parental rights in Chancery Court.

However, the courts are reluctant to remove children from parental control and will terminate all parental rights only if satisfied by clear and convincing evidence.

Once terminated, all rights of the parent concerning the child are severed, including the right of visitation.

Amended Returns

Taxpayers who have filed their Federal income tax return and later found that they did not report some income or failed to claim a deduction or credit may file an amended return. Tony Langone, acting district director of the Internal Revenue Service in Jackson, said.

Form 1040X, "Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return," should be used to correct Forms 1040, 1040A or 1040EZ. Do not file another of these original forms. Form 1040X also may be used to claim a refund of individual income taxes.

The taxpayer should write the income, deductions, and credits on the Form 1040X as they were reported on the original return, as well as any changes being made and corrected amounts. Then the tax should be figured. If tax is owed, it must be paid in full with the Form 1040X, Langone said.

The tax owed will not be subtracted from any refund not yet received or from any amount credited to 1985 estimated tax. A refund will be sent to the taxpayer separately from any refund related to the original return.

Langone cautioned taxpayers to check the completed Form 1040X carefully to make sure that it shows all information called for, the year of the original return being amended and explanations for all changes made.

The Form 1040X filed by Mississippi taxpayers should be mailed to the Internal Revenue Service Center in Atlanta, Ga. 31101.

An amended return must be filed within three years from the date the original return was filed or within two years from the time that the tax was paid, whichever is later. A return filed early is considered filed on the due date.

Langone cautioned taxpayers that before they file a 1040X, they should wait until they have received all Form W-2's and Form 1099's. Also, an amended return filed only a short time after the original return could delay a refund based on that return. Sometimes, it is best to wait until the original refund has been received before filing an amended return, although if the amended return is filed after the due date, the taxpayer would be responsible for any interest or penalty due.

Finally, Langone noted that if a taxpayer's Federal return is changed for any reason, it may affect state income tax liability. Taxpayers should check with their state tax agency for details.

For more information on filing an amended Federal return, write or call the IRS.

Persistent Tax Problems

Taxpayers who meet delays or red tape in solving their Federal tax problems can get help from the Internal Revenue Service Problem Resolution Program (PRP) Office, according to Tony Langone, acting district director of the Internal Revenue Service in Mississippi.

Every IRS district has a PRP office to help taxpayers who have already had unsuccessful contacts with the IRS. People in the PRP office have the authority to cut through the red tape and handle problems promptly. The taxpayer generally deals with one person and is kept informed of the case's progress, Langone said.

The most common problems brought to the PRP office are compliance about missing refunds, mixed-up social security numbers, incorrect billings by IRS, or mistakes by the taxpayer. Last year, PRP handled over 377,000 taxpayer complaints.

Besides solving taxpayer problems, PRP tries to prevent them by discovering flaws in the system. For example, PRP has helped reduce the time to process amended tax returns.

According to Langone, Problem Resolution should not be used as a substitute for normal procedures, because almost all problems can be resolved before they reach PRP. PRP cannot be used to appeal the decisions of a tax examination, but taxpayers with a persistent tax problem will find PRP willing and able to help.

Taxpayers can contact PRP by calling the IRS assistance number listed in the phone book and asking for Problem Resolution.

COPIES OF RETURNS

Copies of prior year tax returns are often required when making application for student loans or grants, real estate loans, and many other business transactions.

Taxpayers who have not retained a copy of prior year returns can get a copy of their return from the Internal Revenue Service.

The charge for a copy of each prior year return is $5, regardless of the number of pages in the return.

Tax return information can be acquired for $2.50 and includes marital status, tax shown on the return, adjusted gross income, taxable income, self-employment tax, and number of exemptions.

Requests for a copy of the prior year return or return information should be made on form 4506, "Request for Copy of Tax Form or Individual Income Tax Account Information." A check or money order in the required amount must accompany the request. Approximately one-fourth of all requests are being returned because the required payment is not included.

Taxpayers requesting a copy of their tax return should allow at least 45 days before receipt of the tax return. Taxpayers requesting tax account information can expect to receive it in about 30 days. Therefore, parents who did not retain a copy of their tax return and expecting to need tax information for students returning to college in the Fall of 1985 should make their request as soon as possible.

BRIBES IN AMERICA: A CONTESTED CONCEPT

By John T. Noonan Jr.

(John T. Noonan Jr. is Professor of Law at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of Bribes (Macmillan).)

Editor's Note: Where does legitimate political influence end and criminal corruption and bribery begin? The ethical standards to which we now hold public officials are much more stringent than they were 200 years ago. And yet we still do not regard every reciprocity—"you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours"—as illegitimate. Dr. Noonan looks at the history of this "contested concept."

When the Constitution of the United States was composed, bribery was one of two crimes mentioned by name as a ground of impeachment of the president and other "civil officers" of the United States. The other expressly-named crime was treason. The Founding Fathers ranked bribery with treason as a potential threat to the republic whose foundations they were laying. Like treason, bribery could subvert the commonwealth itself.

The bribery the Founders chiefly contemplated, as is evident in the debates at the Constitutional Convention, was both bribery by the president—say of the Electoral College—and bribery of the president—say by a foreign government.

Bribery of the judiciary was not discussed; it was apparently taken for granted that it would not be a large problem. Bribery of the legislative branch was discussed only in the most gingerly fashion. The only restriction put on Congress was that its members should be ineligible for offices which were created, in particular in the Book of Deuteronomy, the judge was established as a public figure who had to be impartial, who could not, without betraying his function, take money from one side. With the criminal conviction in 1621 of Lord Chancellor Francis Bacon, this standard was indelibly imprinted in the English judicial system.

The image of the impartial judge was only very gradually extended to other public functionaries.

To take three examples, in the diary of Samuel Pepys one can read of his takings as a naval procurement officer—a dog, a horse, a gown for his wife, sex from a subordinate's wife, and above all cash, so that in a space of seven years he increased net worth 30,000 percent. Pepys' conscience told him it was wrong; but without effective political controls, his conscience yielded to his opportunities.

A second example: Warren Hastings, British governor-general of Bengal, took ten times his princely salary (25,000 pounds) in bribes from his Indian subjects. He was actually impeached by the House of Commons in 1787 and prosecuted with great vigor in the House of Lords by Edmund Burke. But in the face of massive evidence of guilt, he was acquitted. The House of Lords was not yet ready to hold that high English administrators should be free of corruption.

A third example: Only in 1853 was it made a federal crime to bribe a member of Congress. Only in 1873 was a standard involving bribery in fact applied to a member of Congress. The House that year censured Oakes Ames for giving and James Brooks for taking a bribe of Credit Mobilier stock in connection with the federal subsidizing of the Union

Liberty and Justice For All

Next two years, this country will be observing two very special occasions: The 100th anniversary of the dedication of the State of Liberty and the 200th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

Both of these occasions provide opportunities to reflect upon the progress we have made toward fulfilling the promise of "liberty and justice for all." Both anniversaries serve as reminders of the longevity and importance of that ideal so fundamental to our system of law.

However, we need not wait 100 or 200 years to consider the values embodied by Lady Liberty and the Constitution.

Every year, Law Day USA, celebrated on May 1, provides motivation for us to recognize the significance of the law in our daily lives and the role law plays in helping to fulfill the aspiration of all Americans for freedom for fairness, for liberty and justice for all.

Since the creation of the United States, its commitment to liberty and justice for all has been as much a guiding light for humanity as the torch of Lady Liberty.

Long before the Statue of Liberty was dedicated in October of 1886, and before the first glimpse of her torch became a moment to treasure for millions of immigrants, the ideal she represents, liberty and justice for all, was the aspiration of the founders of the United States.

This nation is based on the premise of Liberty and Justice For All, and fulfilling that promise remains the primary goal of our democratic society.

Although some may argue that the promise remains unfulfilled, who would go so far as to say that the goal is undesirable? Who is willing to abandon all hope that Liberty and Justice For All is yet attainable?

And who among us can claim that they have seen no progress toward reaching that goal? Who would deny the impact of Civil Rights and Voting Rights legislation? Who would deny the importance of the American legal system in striving to reach that goal?

We need to constantly remind ourselves that liberty and justice for all under the American system of law is now closer to being a reality than when it was a dream of our forefathers. And what better time to honor the important role law has played in helping to insure liberty and justice for all than this week as we observe on Law Day USA.

KEEP AGRICULTURE #1!

Agriculture is America's number one industry and feeds half the world.

To insure our future as a world leader, our strength and sustenance will have to come from the land and the young people who will protect and manage it.

Young people in high school today will be tomorrow's leaders. Agriculture is a career where young people can make a difference and work with the latest sophisticated technology.

Career opportunities are unlimited if they have the right skills because today's agriculture is marketing, sales and research. It's biogenetics, chemistry, engineering and a whole lot more.

Young people can get a head start on developing those skills. A million young leaders are already confident about their futures because of the experience they are getting now in vocational agriculture and the FFA.

The future is in their hands.

Keep agriculture #1—support vocational agriculture and the FFA!

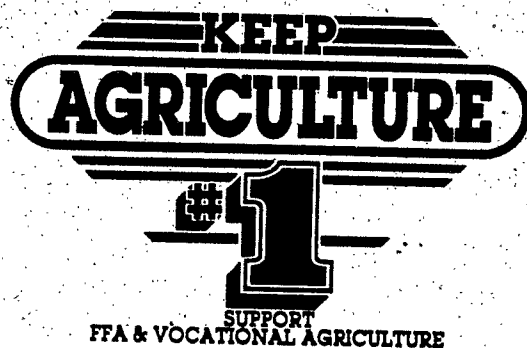

ILLUSTRATION BY MARK SHAVER/PRS

or whose salaries were increased, during their legislative terms.

These three different treatments of bribery—as a ground for removal needing to be mentioned in relation to the president; as beyond mention in relation to the judiciary; as scarcely controllable in regard to Congress—reflect a long history and bring to view the contested character of the concept of the bribe.

A bribe is an inducement improperly influencing the performance of a public function meant to be performed gratuitously, that is, freely and for the benefit of the public. The definition is simple and relatively stable over the centuries. But each element of the definition is subject to debate. What counts as "an inducement"? What counts as "improperly influencing"? What is a "public function"? What public functions are meant to be "performed gratuitously"?

In different cultures in different centuries various answers have involved different views of moral and political conduct. Because what counts as a bribe depends on what counts as each element of a bribe, and because these elements have been and are contested, the idea of the bribe itself is a contested concept.

Historically, the office of judge was the public function first set aside as the one which should not be influenced by cash paid the judge. Based on a model set out in the Bi-

Pacific Railroad. No criminal prosecutions followed the censures.

In Pepys' case, in Hastings' case, in Ames' and Brooks' cases, bribery was clearly viewed as a wrong. In none of these cases, however, was the political structure such that criminal punishment was inflicted for bribery. The contested status of the bribe was visible in the half sanctions—those of conscience or of indictment or of censure—that were imposed.

Today, if deeds similar to those of Pepys, Hastings, or Ames and Brooks were perpetrated and became known, they would be punished as criminal bribery. The criminality of the bribe is no longer contested as to such conduct; it is well-established.

These developments demonstrate a truth and suggest a moral. The truth: What counts concretely as criminal bribery depends on a fusion of moral insight and political judgment.

The moral: If we, looking back, think our ancestors were singularly slow in criminalizing conduct so prejudicial to the common weal as the bribery of administrators, procurement officers and legislators, there may be areas of our political life today where an enlightened conscience would find unacceptable reciprocities. Vigorous rejection of them would lead to new criminal standards governing political conduct.

New SBA advisory council member named

Marie T. Dean, acting director of the Management Assistant Center, has been appointed to a two-year term on the Small Business Administration's State Advisory Council," said Dean.

As a member of the advisory council, Dean will advise the administrator and SBA staff on ways of improving effectiveness of programs, channel information to local business and commercial interests regarding specific SBA program, and recommend new programs to be developed by SBA.

"I hope to be able to reach more of the state's small business community needing assistance through my appointment to the SBA Advisory Council," said Dean.

The Small Business Development Center provides one-on-one management and technical assistance to existing businesses and to individuals interested in starting a new business, at no cost. The center also conducts workshops, seminars and conferences to improve the management skill of business owners. Staffed with experienced business consultants, the center also utilizes business interns from USM.

The center at the USM Gulf Park campus is part of the network of offices to assist small business throughout Mississippi. In addition to Long Beach, other centers are located in Oxford, Starkville, Jackson and satellite offices in Tupelo, Natchez, Southaven and Meridian. The center is sponsored jointly by the University of Southern Mississippi and the Mississippi Research and Development Center.

HOT Day set for May 23

The efforts of the Hancock County Soil and Water District, Soil Conservation Service, Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Federal Land Bank, and Mississippi Forestry Commission will culminate in a county-wide Hold Our Topsoil Field Day Thursday, May 23 at the Clyde Brooks Farm.

The HOT Field Day will be from 3:30 to 7 p.m. Activities will include a tour of the demonstration farm beginning at 4 p.m., information booths, and a meal.

The feature speaker will be Hancock County Senator Gene Taylor. The HOT Field Day is planned to demonstrate effective soil conservation measures to landowners and the public, reducing erosion problems in Hancock County.

More than 140,000 tons of county topsoil, worth more than $1,400,000 is lost annually. This averages about 7.1 tons per acre on cropland.

Loss of topsoil reduces agricultural production and increases production cost through loss of fertilizer, nutrients and organic matter. Erosion also causes sediment to build up in ditches, streams and rivers, polluting the water and causing drainage problems.

years in jail and five years on probation, to be served consecutively with a 20-year, five years suspended, prison sentence for state charges.

In addition, Mitchell gave Ladner a 15-year special parole term.

The federal sentence was the result of an April 1984 indictment of Ladner and his mother Virginia Guilbeau, by a federal grand jury in Brownsville, Texas.

The transfer of federal charges from Texas to Biloxi against Ladner and Guilbeau are according to Rule 20 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Federal charges against Guilbeau, who pleaded not guilty, must be returned to Texas according to Rule 20.

The two were charged with one count of conspiracy to distribute 2,000 pounds of marijuana and one count of distribution.

Ladner, Guilbeau and Cuban national Lázaro Raul Rojas were caught in a U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency sting operation which involved the transportation of 5,100 pounds of marijuana from Texas to Guilbeau's residence.

Guilbeau was found guilty of state charges in connection with the incident in March and was sentenced to 20 years in prison, five years suspended, by Circuit Judge Kosta Vlahos.

Guilbeau was fined $150,000. Ladner, in addition to his prison sentence, was fined $25,000.

Ladner sentenced on federal charges

Gregory Ladner, sentenced last month in Hancock County Circuit Court on drug charges, has received a second jail sentence on federal charges.

Ladner, 35, of Kiln, received the additional sentence April 25 from U.S. District Judge Lansing L. Mitchell of New Orleans.

Mitchell sentenced Ladner to five development. This is certainly something I would like to pursue but it must be done quickly because applications for funds in that program for cities the size of Bay St. Louis must be filed by September. Federal programs are an area I have had a great deal of experience in and a 100 percent success record.

Q.—What are your plans to improve the economic conditions of the city and provide jobs for the large number of unemployed?

Schulz—Administrate the budget to suit all needs and develop an economic environment that encourages people to come into the area. You have to have a businesslike attitude at city hall for businesses to want to come in. We have to plan for the growth of tomorrow.

Q.—What do you feel is the No. 1 priority item facing the new mayor in the next four years?

BENNETT—The most important thing that I will be facing will be to continue to run the city and improve what we have without reaching into the taxpayers pocket anymore. In eight years we have grown, we have a new water well, a new tower, a new fire engine, improved streets and gas lines, drainage and other improvements without taxes being raised.

FRANKIEWICZ—The very first thing that I intend to do is to take what we do with the existing money in the city, with the existing city employees and do more of it, do more with it and do it more efficiently. There is absolutely no question in mind that this city can be much more efficient and that we can get a lot more out of the existing tax dollar.

SCHULZ—The biggest problem we have in the city is management and administration of the services we have. We are lucky that we have our own utility department that we need to run as a money-making investment, to pay the people working of it, give them the benefits that they need and return the utility department to a profit-making institution. I also have an ideal to have a clean city law which makes the property owner responsible for cleaning up his own place and if the city has to clean it up, send a bill.

DISTRICT CHAMPIONS

Loiacano's Health Spa took a hard earned 2 to 1 victory over the Long Beach representative from South Mississippi Soccer Club for the Under-12 District title.

The BAYS team took an early lead when Michael Lee scored on a penalty kick six minutes into the first half. Long Beach had four opportunities on penalty kicks immediately

The balance of the game was controlled by a tenacious Loiacano's defense anchored by "super sweeper" Chad Ambrose.

The fullbacks Trent Farve, Jason Loiacano, Branson Rhodes, and Charlie Merrigan continually sent the ball down to the Long Beach end of the field.

Midway through the second half Jonathan Compretta iced the game with a looping shot over the goalie's head to give Loiacano's a commanding lead of 2-0.

Long Beach scored with only three minutes remaining.

Loiacano's will now represent the Southern District in Jackson vying for the state title on May 4 and 5.

Rocks close baseball season with 11 victories, 6 losses

The St. Stanislaus Rockchaws used a 15-hit attack and the strong pitching of Mark Logan to turn back St. Martin 11-4 in a varsity contest Monday evening at St. Martin.

The victory ended the season for SSC, which compiled an 11-6 worksheet over the varsity baseball season.

Leading hitters for the Rocks were YaSin Shabazz and Mark Logan, who both hit a homerun and double to pace the Rock attack.

Shabazz accounted for 4 RBI's while Phil Wittmann stroked three singles and scored two runs.

Jake Welsh added two hits and scored two runs. Eight Rocks has base hits for St. Stanislaus.

For St. Martin, Pat Mallard accounted for all four runs as he hit two homeruns over the left field fence, and hit a third shot that YaSin Shabazz caught deep against the fence in centerfield.

SSC led off the top of the first inning with two runs. After Donald Pitato grounded out to the second baseman, Mark Logan and David Pitato both walked. Phil Wittmann's single scored Logan and moved Pitato to third base. Jake Welsh's fly out to Renshaw at first base scored Pitato, and Wittmann advanced to second base. St. Martin pitcher Dwayne Delancey then picked off Wittmann to end the top of the first.

St. Martin leadoff batter Eric Grove walked and advanced to second on a throwing error by catcher Jake Welsh. Scott Jurich filed out to Logan on the mound for the first out, and Darren Dutil filed out to Donald Pitato in leftfield. Kevin Stewart singled to left, but a perfect throw from Donald Pitato in left to David Pitato cutting off the throw nailed Grove at the plate. At the end of one, the Rocks led 2-0.

The Rocks struck for another run in the second inning as YaSin Shabazz led off with a solid blast over the left centerfield fence. It was Shabazz's first home run of the year. Delancey then walked to Mark Logan on the mound for the first out, and Darren Dutil filed out to Donald Pitato in leftfield. Kevin Stewart singled to left, but a perfect throw from Donald Pitato in left to David Pitato cutting off the throw nailed Grove at the plate. At the end of one, the Rocks led 2-0.

Elchos then struck out for the third out.

St. Martin picked up a lone run in the bottom of the second when Pat Mallard hit a homerun over the left field fence to bring the score to 3-1 in favor of SSC.

St. Stanislaus rallied for three more runs in the top of the third inning. After Donald Pitato filed out to the second baseman, Mark Logan doubled to right centerfield. David Pitato grounded out for the second out, and Phil Wittmann's single scored Logan. Jake Welsh followed with a single and YaSin Shabazz's double scored Wittmann and Welsh. Louis Schuff struck out to end the inning with the Rocks taking a 6-1 lead.

St. Martin struck back for three runs in the bottom of the third inning when Kevin Stewart led off with a single. Kevin King filed out to Shabazz in centerfield, and Logan walked Carl Renshaw. Pat Mallard then stepped up and hit his second homerun of the game, a three-run blast over the leftfield fence. Logan retired Jake Webb and Barney Fisher in order to end the inning, with the Rocks holding on to a 6-4 lead.

Relief pitcher Kevin Stewart came in for St. Martin in the top of the fourth inning and retired the Rocks in order. Logan returned the favor by retiring St. Martin in order in the bottom of the fourth.

In the fifth inning, the Rocks exploded for four more runs. Mark Logan struck out to lead off the inning, and David Pitato walked. Phil Wittmann then hit his third single of the game and Jake Welsh's fielders choice forced Pitato out.

YaSin Shabazz walked to lead the bases and Louis Schuff followed with a walk to score a run. Pinch hitter Mike Weems hit a deep fly foul to rightfield which scored Welsh and Jay Artigues followed with a single that scored Shabazz. Donald Pitato's ground out to the second baseman ended the inning, with the Rocks on-top by a score of 10-4.

St. Martin was retired again in order in the fifth inning, as Eric Grove popped up to Logan, and Logan struck out Scott Jurich and Daren Dutil.

SSC was not finished as they scored again in the top of the sixth. Mark Logan led off with a homerun over the left centerfield fence, increasing the Rock lead to 11-4. David Pitato then filed out to the centerfielder, Phil Wittmann then struck out, and Jake Welsh hit his second single of the game. YaSin Shabazz struck out to end the inning.

St. Martin could not mount an attack in the sixth. After Kevin Stewart grounded out to second baseman Jay Artigues, Kevin King singled out but was left stranded as Carl Renshaw grounded out to Louis Schuff and Pat Mallard hit a deep fly to centerfield that was caught by Shabazz.

Neither team scored in the seventh inning. Both the Rocks and St. Martin batters were retired in order. The final score had the Rocks winning 11-4.

SSC ended its season 11-6, finishing one game behind St. Martin in second place.

SPORT HEALTH AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Sports and Drugs Don't Mix (Part I)

When people think of "sports," they often think of the baseball, hot-dogs and apple pie type of living — the All-American activities. Sport is equated with good health and fitness. The ideal athlete is commonly thought of as the picture of good health; one who treats his body like a temple. This is not a bad image to portray, but it is quite misleading.

Athletics creates its own type of stress. When added to other stresses imposed by life, it sometimes leads to the athlete seeking a means of relaxing, coping or escaping from the stress of competition. The use of "recreational" or illicit drugs by an athlete is not uncommon. Although society generally accepts practices to "alter the mind," it is the method by which it is accomplished that is judged as good or bad. Hypnosis and forms of meditation are considered acceptable methods in "altering the consciousness." Drugs are also used for this purpose, but it is the method, not the result, that society frowns upon.

While drugs have many beneficial properties in their medicinal use, there is a major difference between drug misuse and drug abuse. A drug is misused when it is taken in an incorrect manner — such as taking penicillin to get rid of a headache. Drug abuse involves abnormal amounts or illegal use to create a mind-altering state for recreational purposes. Any problem that generally exists in society also exists in sports. For the athlete to be isolated from the drug problem that is now present, he would have to separate himself from the ways and changes of society.

Most athletes, when confronted with the problem, will deny there is one. The athlete is no different from any other individual who abuses drugs and alcohol. Drug abuse in athletics has a long history. The problem has even penetrated the ideals of the Olympics. Many athletes have been banned from participating because various drugs were found in trace amounts in certain athletes' blood and urine. The problem has been steadily increasing since 1952, when syringes and ampules were found in dressing rooms at the Oslo Winter Olympics. It is now routine practice to test athletes before Olympic participation in order to detect the presence of drugs in the blood or urine.

Within the last 10 years, steady increase in the use of marijuana, stimulants, sedatives and steroids among young adults has been reported by the Department of Health and Human Services. Many athletes partake in regular use of stimulants and anabolic steroids to "enhance" their performance or use other drugs such as painkillers in order to continue playing while injured. It is hard to conceive a drug-abusing athlete that drugs and sport don't mix, and their continual use is harmful, if not potentially dangerous.

Special Olympic volunteers to include Project Do members

Forty members from Project Do, a teen-age action group from St. Stanislaus and Our Lady Academy, will join volunteers at Special Olympics Saturday at National Space Technology Laboratories.

Four offices from the U.S. Navy and from NSTL are sponsoring the day's activities.

All events will be held in front of the Oceanographic Building.

Over 250 participants are expected to take part in the parade which starts at 9:30 a.m., followed by races, games and clinics.

Entertainment during the day will feature the Marine Band from New Orleans, the Show Stoppers from Our Lady Academy, puppet shows and clowns.

The closing ceremonies will be held at 2:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the games.

Cotton, soybean outlook bleak, catfish bright

By Barry W. Jones
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Mississippi agribusinessmen came to Greenwood recently in search of a few threads of hope among a mostly bleak outlook for farming in 1985.

The most upbeat presentation they heard was on the outlook for farm-raised catfish.

Hugh Purnell, executive vice president of the Catfish Farmers of America, enthusiastically told farmers, lenders and businessmen attending the Mississippi Agribusiness Conference that the outlook for farm-raised catfish is "Light, Bright and White."

Catfish represents the only Mississippi commodity this year where there is more than just small chances for success. Other commodities such as cotton and soybeans are having serious problems including too much supply, too poor prices and dwindling markets.

Farm-raised catfish, however, continues to be another story. "We're expecting an eight to 12 percent growth rate for catfish production this year and the overall outlook is good," Purnell said. "We're blessed with controllable costs because we can book low food prices and we have better acceptance of our product."

Purnell said the big news in the catfish industry continues to be the plan by the fast food chain, Church's Fried Chicken, to market the product in their stores nationwide. More than 300 stores are now selling the product.

"Church's will take 30 percent of our available supply this year," Purnell said. Catfish are now bringing 70 cents per pound for the producer, and Purnell thinks farmers can assume that price for sometime to come.

"If catfish farmers can't make money growing catfish at 70 cents per pound, they don't belong in the industry," Purnell said. "They are poor managers."

Production costs for good managers growing catfish is 58 to 62 cents per pound.

Purnell said the industry is taking steps to protect the current optimism. The steps he described are based on concern, commitment and credibility.

"We have to keep our concern about the industry up," he said. "Do we really care? We have got to have people growing catfish who are not satisfied."

He said one concern right now is that the industry needs to avoid a runaway market. "We've got to keep prices reasonable and be careful about our markets," he said. The concern also spills over into the processing segment of the industry.

"We're too labor intensive in catfish processing and we need some new technology," Purnell said. "We also need some new product development."

Along with the concern, Purnell urged farmers to increase their commitment to catfish production by increasing the number of pounds of catfish produced per acre. He also urged greater support for marketing organizations within the industry.

"We need to figure out how to run what we have to make production available to more markets," Purnell said. "We don't want to be a seasonal item. We need to process 52 weeks out of the year."

Purnell urged lenders present to provide more funds for good catfish farmers in order to make the commitment possible.

The catfish promoter also urged the industry to work toward improving industry credibility.

"We've got to show growth capability and meet market demand," Purnell said. "We need to show more desire to earn a place in the food chain. We don't want to be an 'as is' product."

On Other Community Fronts
Outlook for cotton and soybeans is not as enthusiastic as for farm-raised catfish.

Bill Dunavant, a cotton merchant and president of Dunavant Enterprises in Memphis, said the chances of a recovery in the U.S. textile industry has been strengthened by the fact that import quotas have been tighter since Jan. 1.

Dunavant said the strong dollar has been less of a problem in cotton exports because of a series of unusual circumstances that may allow 6.6 million bales to be shipped over the coming year.

One of those circumstances has been cheaper freight rates from the west coast to Asia.

"We can ship cotton to Japan for $8 a bale, but it costs us $13 to $14 to ship a bale across our country," Dunavant said. "Still the situation allowing U.S. cotton production to compete in markets they couldn't ever get into otherwise."

Surveying the cotton scene worldwide, Dunavant made some observations. Among them:

—U.S. cotton competition for the next seven or eight months will come from countries like Pakistan, Paraguay, Australia and Brazil. He said the problem may extend into next year but will resolve itself in time.

—Communist China poses a competition threat to U.S. cotton in the long term, but not in the short run. "For my company, China is not a problem right now," he said.

—Mississippi producers will carry rying what he called, after-the-rain cotton need to sell that cotton as soon as they can.

"Seventy percent of U.S. textiles are using Mississippi cotton, but because of the rain at harvest last year, this is the worst spinning crop I've seen in my lifetime," he said.

Dunavant said that because of this spinning difficulty, much of this cotton will go into export markets for packing and other non-textile uses.

"If I could get a loan, plus $2 to $6 equity, I think I would sell that cotton," he said.

—Dr. Willard Sparks of Sparks Commodities, Inc., in Memphis said the strength of the dollar and lack of export sales are the basic problems for soybeans.

Sparks also suggested that soybean prices at $5.50 per bushel may still be too high.

"If nothing happens to change the world situation, the pressure will be on the market next fall to have November beans go to $4.80," Sparks said. "The only reason beans haven't gone down is the domestic oil demand."

Sparks thinks soybean oil supplies will begin building to oversupply levels later this year.

HOME EQUITY CONVERSION

Question: I read in this column some time ago an article about elderly people being able to convert the equity in their homes into a monthly income supplement. What is the status of such a program? P.B., McComb

Answer: Dear P.B.:

As discussed previously, home equity conversion allows the elderly to draw on the equity in their homes to supplement living expenses without giving up their homes.

Based on data in the Annual Housing Survey, 13 million homes in this country are owned by people who are 65 years of age or older; these 13 million homes house approximately 70 percent of the nearly 27 million Americans who fall into that category.

Some of these elderly people are faced with the dilemma of being house-rich and cash-poor.

Estimates are that the average equity in these homes is more than $65,000, and many of these people live on small incomes that have not kept pace with rising property taxes, utility costs, maintenance costs and other housing-related charges.

Although the concept of home equity conversion has long been accepted as a way elderly homeowners could tap into their equity to supplement their income, progress in practical application has been extremely slow.

One of the primary problems cited has been a lack of understanding, not only by the elderly homeowner, but also by the financial industry and the legal profession.

Other issues mentioned are the need for third-party counseling and the risk involved for both the homeowner and the lender. It would appear that these are the same issues that have been aired time and time again over the years.

As one lender has noted, "It is time we stop discussing home equity conversion, and get on with it." Perhaps this program will become more common. Certainly the need exists. For answers to your questions, write Dr. Dennis Tosh, P.O. Box 295, University, MS 38677.

ETV Brief

A.M. WEATHER

Having pulled through this past winter's cold waves, Arctic blasts, Alberta Clipper and ice store by the skin of their chattering teeth, many Mississippians are relishing the first signs of spring and summer. But weather news doesn't end with winter.

"A.M. Weather," seen every weekday morning at 6:45 a.m. on Mississippi ETV, reports small craft advisories, flash flood warnings, stockmen's advisories, high fire danger advisories, hurricane alerts, air stagnation warnings and just plain clear, sunny skies.

"A.M. Weather," is produced by the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting in cooperation with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and is seen on more than 260 public television stations across the nation.

The producers take the weather seriously, and the series' non-sensational approach to reporting the weather appeals to an audience interested in a straightforward, comprehensive look at the national weather picture not always available from other sources.

Coast students spend Spring break touring Nation's Capital

Some 22 Gulf Coast elementary and high school students recently embarked from Slidell, La. on a 25-hour rail journey to Washington, D.C. for a six day tour of highlights of the Nation's Capital.

In preparation for the study trip during Spring break a model of a Washington, D.C. landmark was constructed by each fourth, fifth and sixth grader at Coast Episcopal Elementary School in Bay St. Louis. Mrs. LaMar Jordan, principal of CEES, boarded 20 elementary students, two high school students and four mother-chaperones for an AmTrak trip to Washington.

Travel around the city was by charter bus. Touring began with an official picture of the group on the west side of the Capitol which is under construction.

As they viewed the White House, the plans to close off Pennsylvania Avenue to traffic were explained to the students.

Terrorist attacks are a constant threat and tight security is maintained all over the city.

Ornamental cherry blossom trees which abound in the Tidal Basin and around the Washington Monument were in full bloom, drawing large crowds to the city.

At Arlington National Cemetery, students, Ross Bonura of Diamondhead and Mallory Mestayer of Bay St. Louis participated in a wreath-laying ceremony at the Tomb of The Unknown Soldier.

Then the group watched the changing of the Guard. As they were leaving the area, a horsedrawn caisson bearing the body of Army Major Arthur Nicholson Jr. is stopped near the Tomb of The Unknown Soldier.

The students watched his funeral service from a hillside, and later, when reading a report in The Washington Post, they saw themselves described as "a few people drifted down the hillside from the Tomb of The Unknown Soldier to stare at the casket, the mounds of flowers and the empty chairs."

At the Vietnam National Memorial, Regan Kane of Bay St. Louis, looked up two names in the book of the 58,000 memorialized, located the names, and made pencil rubbings to bring back to Bay St. Louis.

A night-time tour was made to the Lincoln Memorial, the Jefferson Memorial and the Iwo Jima Memorial, as well as underground caverns below the Lincoln Memorial.

At the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts the students saw a huge bust of the late President John F. Kennedy which was sculptured by the same artist, Bostonian Robert Berks, who created a new monumental bronze state of Albert Einstein outside the National Academy of Science.

On a tour to Embassy Row and the Washington Cathedral, the bus stopped to look at the Daughters of the American Revolution National Headquarters.

Two students, Karen Kohl and Betsy Boyce were unaware that they had won first place in a local DAR essay contest.

Boyce's essay also won third place on the state level.

Further out Embassy Row the tourists viewed the Victorian house which serves as the residence of the Vice-President of the United States.

Crowning the highest point in the city is the 14th century Gothic Washington Cathedral.

Sixth largest cathedral in the world, this Episcopalian shrine is built in the shape of a cross and work continues to complete the edifice.

One rainy afternoon was spent going to three of the museums in the Smithsonian Complex.

The group divided into smaller groups so that each building could be seen at the pace and the interest of each individual.

At the National Museum of American History, gowns worn by the First Ladies were of special interest.

At the museum of Natural History, no one missed seeing the Hope Diamond or the live insects. At the National Air and Space Museum everyone saw the movie "Columbia," the moon rocks and famous vehicles of flight.

One day was spent at Mount Vernon and stopping to tour Alexandria, Va.

Another day the group travelled by bus to Williamsburg, the reconstructed town which brings colonial history alive.

The bus driver, Mr. Koslaski, was a marvelous story teller. The best ghost story was told in front of the Octagon House. Dolley Madison moved her family to this house for two years during the reconstruction of the White House from the War of 1812.

The tour group was housed near the Pentagon, with rooms which overlooked the city.

The last day for touring began in the office of Senator John C. Stennis of Mississippi.

The Senator's Aide, Steve C. Grafton, spoke to the group in the senator's office and pointed out items of interest such as a chair symbolically reserved for Mississippians who could not afford to come to lobby for their own point of view.

The aide took the group to an underground train between the office building and the Capitol. The centrally located Rotunda and the Statuary Hall were the main points of interest open to the public at that time.

A short walk took the group to the United States Supreme Court where a guide explained the operation and history of the court.

The group next toured the Ford Theater and box where President Abraham Lincoln was shot.

The modern musical Godspell is playing now in the renovated theater.

Across the street the home where Lincoln was carried by the secret service and where he died is open for viewing.

A tour of the FBI headquarters showed the technology of criminology.

A final stop was made at the National Archives with its impressive seven story high bronze doors.

Lights were kept low and major attractions such as the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, rest in helium filled cases and are lowered into bomb proof shelters every night.

The train platform in Slidell was full of family and friends waiting to welcome the group back home.

FUNERAL PROCESSION—Participants on a recent Coast Episcopal Schools student tour of Washington, D.C. were allowed to remain in Arlington National Cemetery as spectators during funeral services for U.S.

Army Major Arthur Nicholson Jr. who was killed in East Germany. The major's widow here follows the caisson carrying his body through the cemetery to the grave site.

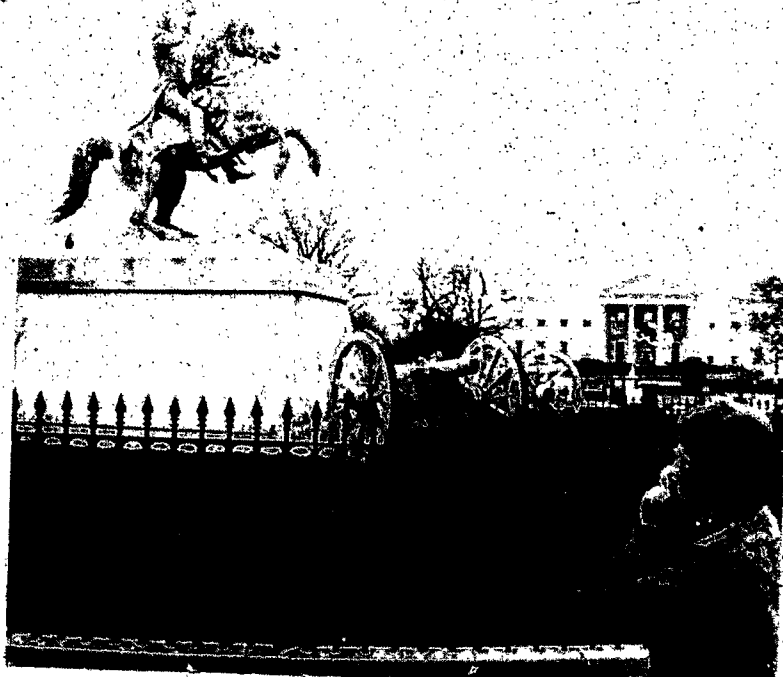

REST IN PEACE—Students and chaperones following services into the Arlington Cemetery grave following services for VIETNAM VETERANS NATIONAL MEMORIAL is viewed by, from the left, Kristin Krogstad, Betsy Boyce, Blair Shellnut, Angel Puckett, Melissa Cornelius, Dawn Williams and Karin Kohl.

ROSS BONURA and Mallory Mestayer dedicating a wreath from Coast Episcopal Schools at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

REGAN KANE takes a picture of President Andrew Jackson, hero of the Battle of New Orleans. The statue is made from cannon that he captured at Pensacola during the War of 1812 when the White House was burned by the British.

MRS. LaMAR JORDAN points out details in the ceiling of the Rotunda of the Capitol Building.

ADVANCED RESEARCH

The Chemistry Department at the University of Southern Mississippi has been awarded a piece of equipment that is expected to advance research on anti-corrosion coatings.

The voltametric analyzer was donated by the IBM Corporation at a value of $5,200, according to Dr. Newton C. Fawcett, USM associate professor of chemistry.

Fawcett said the instrument, which has been on loan from IBM for some time, is used in research of current and voltage in chemical systems.

Your Stars Above

BY EVE EWING

ARIES (3-21/4-19) The winds of change are blowing in your career plans. Study the situation carefully and take nothing for granted. If you can't accept the coming changes, then consider changing companies.

TAURUS (4-20/5-20) You might be pleasantly surprised if you have some of your past "bargains" appraised. Everyone laughed when you dragged those old things home, but you may have the last laugh yet.

GEMINI (5-21/6-20) When to start a family is strictly between you and your mate. Tell the relatives to keep out of it. This is too important a decision to be pressured about.

CANCER (6-21/7-22) You have only yourself to blame if friends and relatives use your home like a hotel. Put your foot down, or better yet, start collecting those JOU's and visit them for a change.

LEO (7-23/8-22) The mark of a good executive is the ability to designate assignments. No one can do it all by themselves. Overcome your need to control every little detail, and parcel out the work.

VIRGO (8-23/9-22) Sometimes a third party can mediate disagreements between two friends, but the current situation is not the right occasion. Remove yourself from the middle and let them settle it themselves.

LIBRA (9-23/10-22) Children can be the source of great joy, but also of much friction. You and your mate should talk over your differing views on child care, and come to a united decision.

SCORPIO (10-23/11-21) A separate career is vitally important to someone you love. This is in no way a threat to you, so be understanding and supportive. The results may surprise you.

SAGITTARIUS (11-22/12-21) Your problems will only follow you if you try to run away. Face up to your difficulties now, however painful, then you can start fresh with no regrets.

CAPRICORN (12-22/1-19) Settle your religious differences before you marry, or live to regret it. If they can't be reconciled, then it would be best to break off, or unhappiness will surely follow.

AQUARIUS (1-20/2-18) Enthusiasm alone is not enough to make your dreams come true. Put a little more elbow grease into the venture and things stand a better chance of panning out for you.

PISCES (2-19/3-20) More friendships are ruined by gossip than by any other single reason. Vow now and forever to never reveal a confidence or discuss a friend with others. Impossible, you say? Difficult, yes, but not impossible.

WE TREAT YOU LIKE A PERSON. Not a NUMBER!

When you buy insurance from an agent who works directly for one insurance company, he's probably not the person you talk to when you have a claim. Most one-company agents have nothing to do with claims. It's between you and the adjuster.

That's not the case when you deal with an Independent Insurance Agency like us. We're right here ready to serve you when you have a claim...helping you reach a fair settlement as quickly as possible.

Scholarship aid to be discussed at USM-Coast's Spring Briefings

Gulf Coast students entering the University of Southern Mississippi next fall could be eligible for more than $12,000 in scholarship aid, depending on their level of academic achievement.

Scholarship application criteria, admission requirements and a new General Education (CORE) Curriculum that goes into effect for the fall term will be among topics discussed during special USM "Spring Briefings" along the Mississippi Gulf Coast May 1-2.

On Wednesday, May 1, one briefing will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon at the Holiday Inn in Gulfport and another briefing will be held from 1:30 to 4 p.m. at the Lafont Inn in Pascagoula. On Thursday, a briefing will be held from 9 a.m. to noon at the Ramada Inn in Biloxi.

Searcy Taylor, admissions counselor for USM-Gulf Park, will be among USM officials who will discuss a variety of topics aimed at easing the transition of college-bound students into university life.

The Gulf Coast meetings are a part of a series of eight "Spring Briefings" organized by USM officials throughout south and central Mississippi.

Various scholarships available to qualifying students entering USM next fall will be discussed. They include:

—Awards of Excellence, a total of $7,600 ($1,900 a year) for in-state students and $11,900 ($2,976 a year) for out-of-state students with composite ACT scores of 20 or above.

—Honors College Awards, $2,200 each, or $550 per year.

—Scholars' Awards, $4,200 or $1,050 per year for students with ACT scores of 28-29; $3,000, or $750 per year for ACT scores of 26-27; and $2,000 or $500 per year for ACT scores of 23-25.

—USM Merit Awards, $2,000 or $500 per year for National Merit finalists; and $1,200 or $300 per year for National Merit semifinalists.

—Valedictorian Awards, a $250 one-time award for ACT scores of 20 or above; $300 for ACT scores of 20-24; and $200 for ACT scores of 15-19.

—Presidential Scholarships, full scholarships.

Combinations of these scholarships are available depending upon ACT/SAT scores and awards. For example, a National Merit finalist with an ACT composite score of 30, who is class valedictorian and is accepted in to the USM Honors College, would be eligible for a total of $12,200 in scholarships.

The university's new CORE curriculum, which will affect all entering freshmen, will change basic academic requirements in an effort to broaden the knowledge base and sharpen the intellectual skills of future graduates.

The new CORE will raise the required number of general education credit hours from 32 to 46, with a renewed emphasis on the humanities and other basics of broad-based learning.

Poppy sale aids local veterans

"More than one-half of the net proceeds received from the sale of Buddy Poppies remains here in our own community to meet the calls from needy veterans," Commander Norman Tartavouille of the local VFW Post stated in announcing plans for the annual sale of Buddy Poppies on US-90 in Bay St. Louis, Saturday, May 25.

"The post maintains a relief fund into which is placed all net profits received from the sale of Buddy Poppies," Tartavouille said.

"This fund is available to meet any calls for relief from our local veterans."

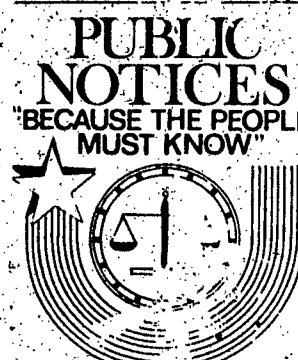

As in previous years these symbolic flowers of Flanders Field will be sold on the highway by a group of volunteer members of the VFW post and members of its ladies auxiliary.

They will be assisted by volunteer workers from youth groups in the community.

"Most of the money that we collect in this sale will remain right here in our own community, to help finance the relief and welfare work which we have undertaken in behalf of our own veterans in need, and their dependents," explains Tartavouille.

"The balance of the proceeds of the annual Buddy Poppy sold to the operation of the VFW National Home for widows and orphans at Eaton Rapids, Mich. This is the only home of its kind in the world. It was founded in 1925."

Other topics to be discussed during the briefings will include a USM academic overview; international academic honors and programs; admission requirements; programs of the USM Division of Continuing Education; and adult programs and services.

ETV Brief

NEW SERIALS

"Mystery" and "Masterpiece Theatre" begin new serials on Mississippi ETV this week. "The Woman in White" by Wilkie Collins and "Strangers and Brothers" by C.P. Snow can be seen at 8 and 9 p.m., Sundays, beginning May 5.

In "The Woman in White," the ghostly vision of a woman dressed entirely in white appears to Walter Hartright on Hampstead Heath, London, one evening. Hartright soon discovers that the secret to the woman's identity and the beginning of a compelling mystery lie only a short time away.

"Strangers and Brothers" is told through the eyes of Lewis Elliot, gifted lawyer, academic and civil servant. The action ranges from the quads of Cambridge to pre-World War I Berlin, across the embattled lawns of the great "political" country houses to Parliament, Whitehall and the "Corridors of Power."

Following Elliot's public career, private loves and friendships, the epic reveals an intimate portrait of an outsider who penetrates the English establishment without belonging to it, and an unsurpassed record of English life from the first world war to the late 1960s.

Bay Catholic Elementary students bid farewell to spiritual advisors

Karen Parker delivers farewell message from her first grade classmates.

Bay Catholic Elementary School recently conducted special ceremonies to honor associate pastors of Our Lady of The Gulf Parish who also served as spiritual advisors to the students.

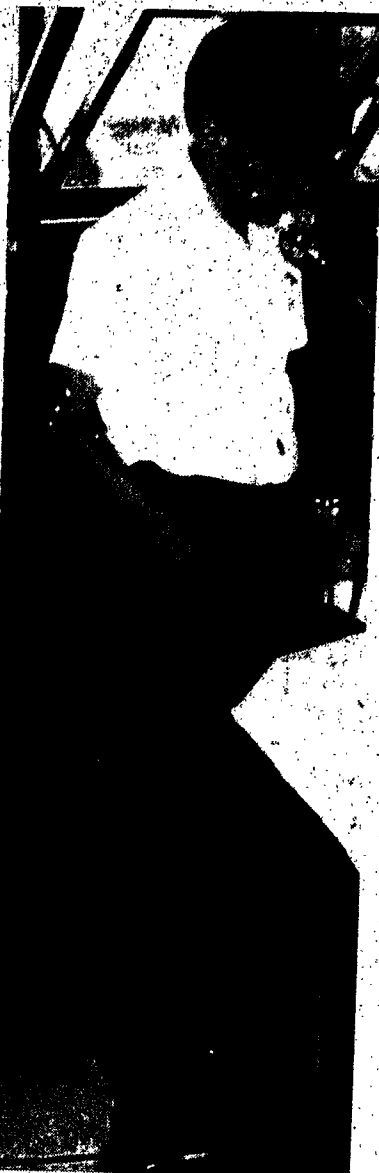

Honored just prior to their reassignment to other parishes in the Biloxi Diocese were Fathers Francis Farrell and Henry McInerney.

Fr. Farrell has been transferred to Our Lady of Fatima Parish in Biloxi and Fr. McInerney to Sacred Heart Parish there.

They have been replaced here by Monsignor James McGough and Rev. Charles Venus, both formerly of St. Paul's Parish in Pass Christian.

Fr. Farrell had previously served at Sacred Heart in Biloxi until 1980 when he came to OLG.

Fr. McInerney also came to OLG in 1980, having previously served at Our Lady of Victories Parish in Pascagoula.

Brandon Rhodes, representing the fifth grade class, presents class' message to Father Farrell.

RETURN OF MARK TWAINISM

More and more, Mark Twainism is returning to Mississippi. Renewed interest in waterway travel has surrounded this state as old-fashioned paddlewheel steamboats and modern diesel-powered cruiseships both are making regular calls at Mississippi River port cities throughout the tourist season.

Meanwhile, the Tenn-Tom readies facilities in anticipation of a surge of new commerce and recreation along this state's eastern side, and the Gulf Coastal area spruces up and puts on its most fetching charm in hope of luring the Navy to make Pascagoula the home port of a U.S. Navy battleship and support vessels.

It is only natural that Mississippi's strategic water resources should now be coming into their own. And since the job in town recently has been described as this state's leading cash crop for farmers, commerce developing along our waterways has something good in store for everyone through stepped up business activity.

Last week this writer's travel schedule coincided twice with those of three cruiseships at both Vicksburg and Natchez. The Mississippi Queen and the Delta Queen played out their most captivating hands at 5:30 p.m. last Wednesday as they sent tourists scurrying back aboard with blasts from their deep-throated steam whistles.

Next they raised their front mounted gangways and backed away from Natchez-under-the-hill amid spirited melodies from their callopes.

The departure provided merriment and excitement for hordes of tourists which lined her rails waving goodbyes to local citizens and other tourists who had turned out in goodly numbers to watch the big paddle-wheeled vessels steer upstream for several exciting minutes before making a sweeping turn into the strong current of the Mississippi River and sweep southward beneath the river bridge.

The late afternoon rays of a spring sun gleamed through splashing water from the massive paddles.

Still in port was the modern cruiseship Savannah which would depart later but join the steamers at other ports of call.

In mid-afternoon I was privileged to tour both steamboats as a guest of the Garden Clubs of Mississippi in convention at Natchez.

Hoop-skirted hostesses led the Mississippi ladies through the vessels in small groups of 20, and showed them the lavish furnishings of the vessels which were built in Glasgow, Scotland, in sections many years ago.

Both vessels have histories as devious as the river's route itself, including military service during which time a dull grey paint covered the ships' ornate furnishings.

Of economic interest to Mississippians is the fact that these Mississippi river cruiseships cater to major existing tour attractions in these port cities such as beautiful antebellum homes that grace the old river towns, the National Military Park and Courthouse Museum at Vicksburg, and pilgrimage homes and other attractions of Natchez.

Along the Tenn-Tom waterway system passenger traffic may be a while in coming, but it is the low cost of transporting farm and industrial products in and out of heartland America that has folks excited.

The impounding of water at locks and dams has created valuable lakes or reservoirs that already are drawing sportsmen and vacationers into the scenic hill country of northeast Mississippi.

The Mississippi Gulf Coast with its white sand beaches, offshore islands, and accompanying recreational development long have served as a magnet to state citizens and visitors, but the chance now pending for the U.S. Navy battleship Wisconsin to utilize Pascagoula as its homeport, along with its support units, is nothing short of a greatly needed financial windfall for this state's coastal area, while giving area exporters and importers direct access to the oceans of the world and the commerce thereupon.

On personal finances

How long has it been since you analyzed your personal finances? Some people are surprised at what they learn from the analysis. When preparing and planning for your family's financial needs, the following guidelines for various years of the life cycle may be helpful:

During the thirties

Four firsts must be taken care of: An annual income, a place to live, a reserve fund that can be used for an emergency, and low-cost life insurance. Basic life style expenditures such as housing, transportation, food and clothing, as well as periodic expenses such as car insurance, property tax, holidays, vacation and education costs are a must. Focus on getting in the habit of saving something for investments and resist the instant gratification craze of buy now, pay later.

During the forties

Try to control the increase in life style costs which come with children getting older and parents feeling financial confidence from job security. Focus on investments that family can enjoy and afford, such as vacation property, a boat or a computer. Shifting of income to children for education fund can reduce taxes and achieve education goals. Extra money is needed to invest in growth products for future needs.

During the fifties

A decrease in basic life style expenses may come if children are on their own. Concentrate on retirement planning and investment assets. Pay off home mortgage if possible. The developing of new personal growth activities may help ease the empty nest syndrome.

During the sixties

If there are outstanding debts, get them paid off. Get investment assets managed to stay even with inflation. The estate should be in order with the financial affairs being simple and easy to manage.

More communities eligible for low-interest FmHA loans

More low-income communities will be eligible for reduced interest rates on loans and for grants to finance community facilities under changes being made by the Farmers Home Administration, Dan Mattox, FmHA state director for Mississippi, reports.

"Some communities were inadvertently denied this eligibility when we changed our formula for allocating funds last September," Mattox said. Farmers Home can now make loans at intermediate interest rates and provide development grants for water and waste disposal systems to rural communities where the median household income is more than 85 percent of a state's non-metropolitan median household income, but still below the poverty line.

Interest rates are set at three levels: A "five percent" rate is available when the loan is required to meet health or sanitary standards and the median household income is below the poverty line established by the Office of Management and Budget.

Loans that do not qualify for a five-percent interest rate may be made at an intermediate rate halfway between five percent and the market rate. The market rate applies to other loans and is established quarterly by FmHA based on current yields of comparable outstanding municipal obligations.

"We were in a situation where some low income communities—those below the poverty line—were ineligible for intermediate interest rates, and if they did not need to remove a health or safety danger, could not get a five-percent interest rate. If they could qualify for a loan it had to be made at the market interest rates," Mattox said.

Community facilities loans are made to finance water and waste disposal systems, fire stations, medical facilities, libraries, town halls, and other needed facilities. The loans are made to public entities, such as counties, municipalities, special purpose districts, Indian tribes and nonprofit associations.

POWER RECORD—Some 25,000 miles of transmission lines brought a record amount of electricity to customers of The Southern Company's four utilities in 1984. More than 114 billion kilowatt-hours flowed across the network to help meet the energy needs of an estimated 10 million Southerners. The Southern Company is the parent firm of Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power and Mississippi Power.

Tax credits available for youth employees

Summertime is almost here, and that means young people will soon be out looking for summer jobs.

In an effort to help improve the youth employment picture by giving employers an incentive to hire young people, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 established qualified summer youth employees as a target group in the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) program.

This tax credit can be a real money-saver for Mississippi employers. Through TJTC, an employer can get a tax credit of 85 percent on the first $3,000 paid to an eligible summer worker.

This could amount to a savings of up to $2,550 for each eligible summer youth hired—the equivalent of paying that youth only 50 cents per hour.

Last summer, many Mississippi employers realized a "bottom line" savings in their tax bills by using the credits available through TJTC.

Under the program, a qualified summer youth employee is someone who starts to work after April 30, 1985, and works any 90 consecutive day period between May 1 and Sept. 15, 1985, has not previously worked for the employer, and is certified by the Mississippi State Employment Service (Job Service) prior to starting work.

Employers who participated in the program last year may participate in it again this year; however, they may not claim a tax credit on any young employee who has previously worked for them.

Employers interested in finding out more about the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) program should contact their local Employment Service Office.
